An Egyptian court on Saturday postponed a hearing in a compensation case filed by the Suez Canal authority against the owners of a container ship that blocked the canal for six days in March, giving the sides more time to negotiate, legal sources said. The Ever Given, one of the world's largest container ships, became jammed across the canal in high winds on March 23, halting traffic in both directions and disrupting global trade. The Suez Canal Authority (SCA) initially demanded $916 million in compensation from the Ever Given's Japanese owner Shoeni Kisen for disruption caused by the blockage.Viral video appeared to show a woman approaching a bear family at the national park before the mother charged at her.All the big brands are included: Sony, Samsung, Bose, Shark, iRobot, Keurig, Ninja, Microsoft and more!The fitness trainer opened up about remarks on Lizzo's body that earned her criticism.Macron tells Africa's leaders he seeks to reset French ties with the continentPresident examines the past and admits his country's mistakes in Rwanda, but critics are sceptical of a meaningful shift France's President Emmanuel Macron reviews the honour guard during a welcoming ceremony at the government's Union Buildings, in Pretoria, South Africa, on 28 May. While the documentary chronicles Eilish's career from the making of her 2019 album When We All Fall Asleep, Where Do We Go? to the 2020 Grammys — where she and her brother Finneas O'Connell took home a total of eleven awards — it's unlikely to include insight into her new music. However, Eilish told Colbert that she's made an entirely new album in quarantine, and based on the details she shared, we hope she releases it ASAP.Eilish kicked off her Where Do We Go? World Tour on Mar. 9, 2020, and she only got to perform three shows before the tour was shut down by the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic. The 19-year-old musician was sent inside like the rest of us, though at first, the break gave her much-needed rest. "The year has sucked, and if I could go back and change it I would," said Eilish. "But at the same time I've gotten more time off than I've ever, ever had, and of course I think that goes for everyone, but that was true for me after two weeks of it."Detailing that it was the most time she's had off "in like four years," the singer then revealed that she made a unique new album in quarantine. "I just don't think I would have made the same album, or even the album at all, if it weren't for COVID. That doesn't mean it's about COVID at all, it's just that, when things are different in your life, you're different. That's just how it is. So, I have to thank Covid for that, and that's about it," she said with a laugh.Colbert said that after watching the documentary and listening to her music, he wonders why Eilish sings so softly in her songs. "You have a beautiful voice. You sound like if you wanted to, you could burn the room down," he said. "Are you ever going to belt for us?"Noting that she "definitely could," Eilish hints that listeners could hear some powerhouse vocals in her new music. "There's a couple moments on this album. I pull some tricks out," she teased. "It's really just about what I feel like sounds good. It's not like I can't do it." She continued, "You'll get a little bit. It'll come." Here's to hoping the album doesn't sit on Eilish's hard drive for much longer. We need to hear it!
